Todd Strada is a Principal in the firm's Defined Benefit Administration Practice. He joined Findley in 2010 with more than ten years of pension administration experience. In his role as Principal, Todd oversees and manages the Defined Benefit Administration team in Chicago. This includes the overall client engagement, responding to and developing sales proposals, the staffing for existing and prospective clients and the internal growth of our associates dedicated to our Defined Benefit delivery. From a technical side, Todd plays an integral role in all platform enhancements and implementations; either setting them up or acting as a technical resource for those associates doing so. This includes taking the complex plan designs and coding their unique parameters within our system.

Prior to joining the firm, Todd worked as a Lead System Analyst with an industry leader in benefit administration outsourcing. He handled all system modification projects, including managing complete platform changes on multiple occasions. He acted as the technical resource for clients when consulting on system capabilities and enhancements, automation solutions, and subsequently created project plans for their quality deliverables. Todd also worked on all phases of administration seeing projects from implementation to their ongoing state and played vital roles partnering with clients to provide quality day-to-day delivery and adding value to participants by managing web design and total compensation statements.

Todd received his BBA from the University of Iowa.
